UNIVERSITÀ DI BOLOGNA

Manuela Moschella is a Professor of Political Science in the Department of Political and Social Sciences at the University of Bologna, where she also serves as Director of the research centre CONNECT – Transnational Connections and Governance. She is an Adjunct Professor at Johns Hopkins University SAIS-Europe and one of the editors of the Review of International Political Economy. She has served as Associate Fellow at the Europe Programme at Chatham House and as Senior Fellow at the Centre for International Governance Innovation (CIGI). Her research focuses around the political dynamics of economic policymaking, the evolving interplay between technocratic governance and democratic accountability, and the transformation of European political economy and European economic governance.

Moschella's latest book is titled Unexpected Revolutionaries. How Central banks Made and Unmade Economic Orthodoxy (2024, Cornell University Press).

She is also one of the co-editors of European Political Economy: Theoretical Approaches and Policy Issues (Oxford University Press, 2023).
