A Day in a Consultant's Life

Dott. Riccardo Spadini

(Avanade)

Abstract

During university studies we learn a large variety of notions, get to know several statistical techniques and perform many lab activities, but we often start to ask ourselves: "What will I do when I get a job? Will I get to apply all this knowledge, and how? Or are there some other concepts that will come out as a surprise?"

This seminar aims at giving a general overview of the day-by-day activities carried out by a data scientist in a consultancy company. Some projects will be briefly illustrated, along with the tools typically used in the data science world.
